Architectural Splendour.

Mumbai's Gothic Architecture, the City's Lesser-known Legacy.

India's most lively city is also known for its old-world charm and is one of the most characteristically Victorian cities in the world.

The city is dotted with heritage structures of neoclassical and Victorian Gothic design. These edifices are ornate with lively colours, carvings of flying buttresses, lancet windows and stained glasses.

While this style was initially used in churches, it was soon adapted in the construction of public places and mansions.

However, it didn't take long for the city to develop its own architectural style. It was called the Mumbai Gothic architecture, which was a blend of Gothic and modern styles of the era. The architects also drew inspiration from European styles, which include Dutch roofs, Swiss timbering, German gables, Tudor casements and, of course, Indian features.

The Epicentre of Art Deco Architecture in Asia.

During the late 1930s, the architects of Mumbai introduced the city – to Art Deco designs. This new style of architecture used not only scientifically relevant materials but also propagated Western-style furniture and interiors.

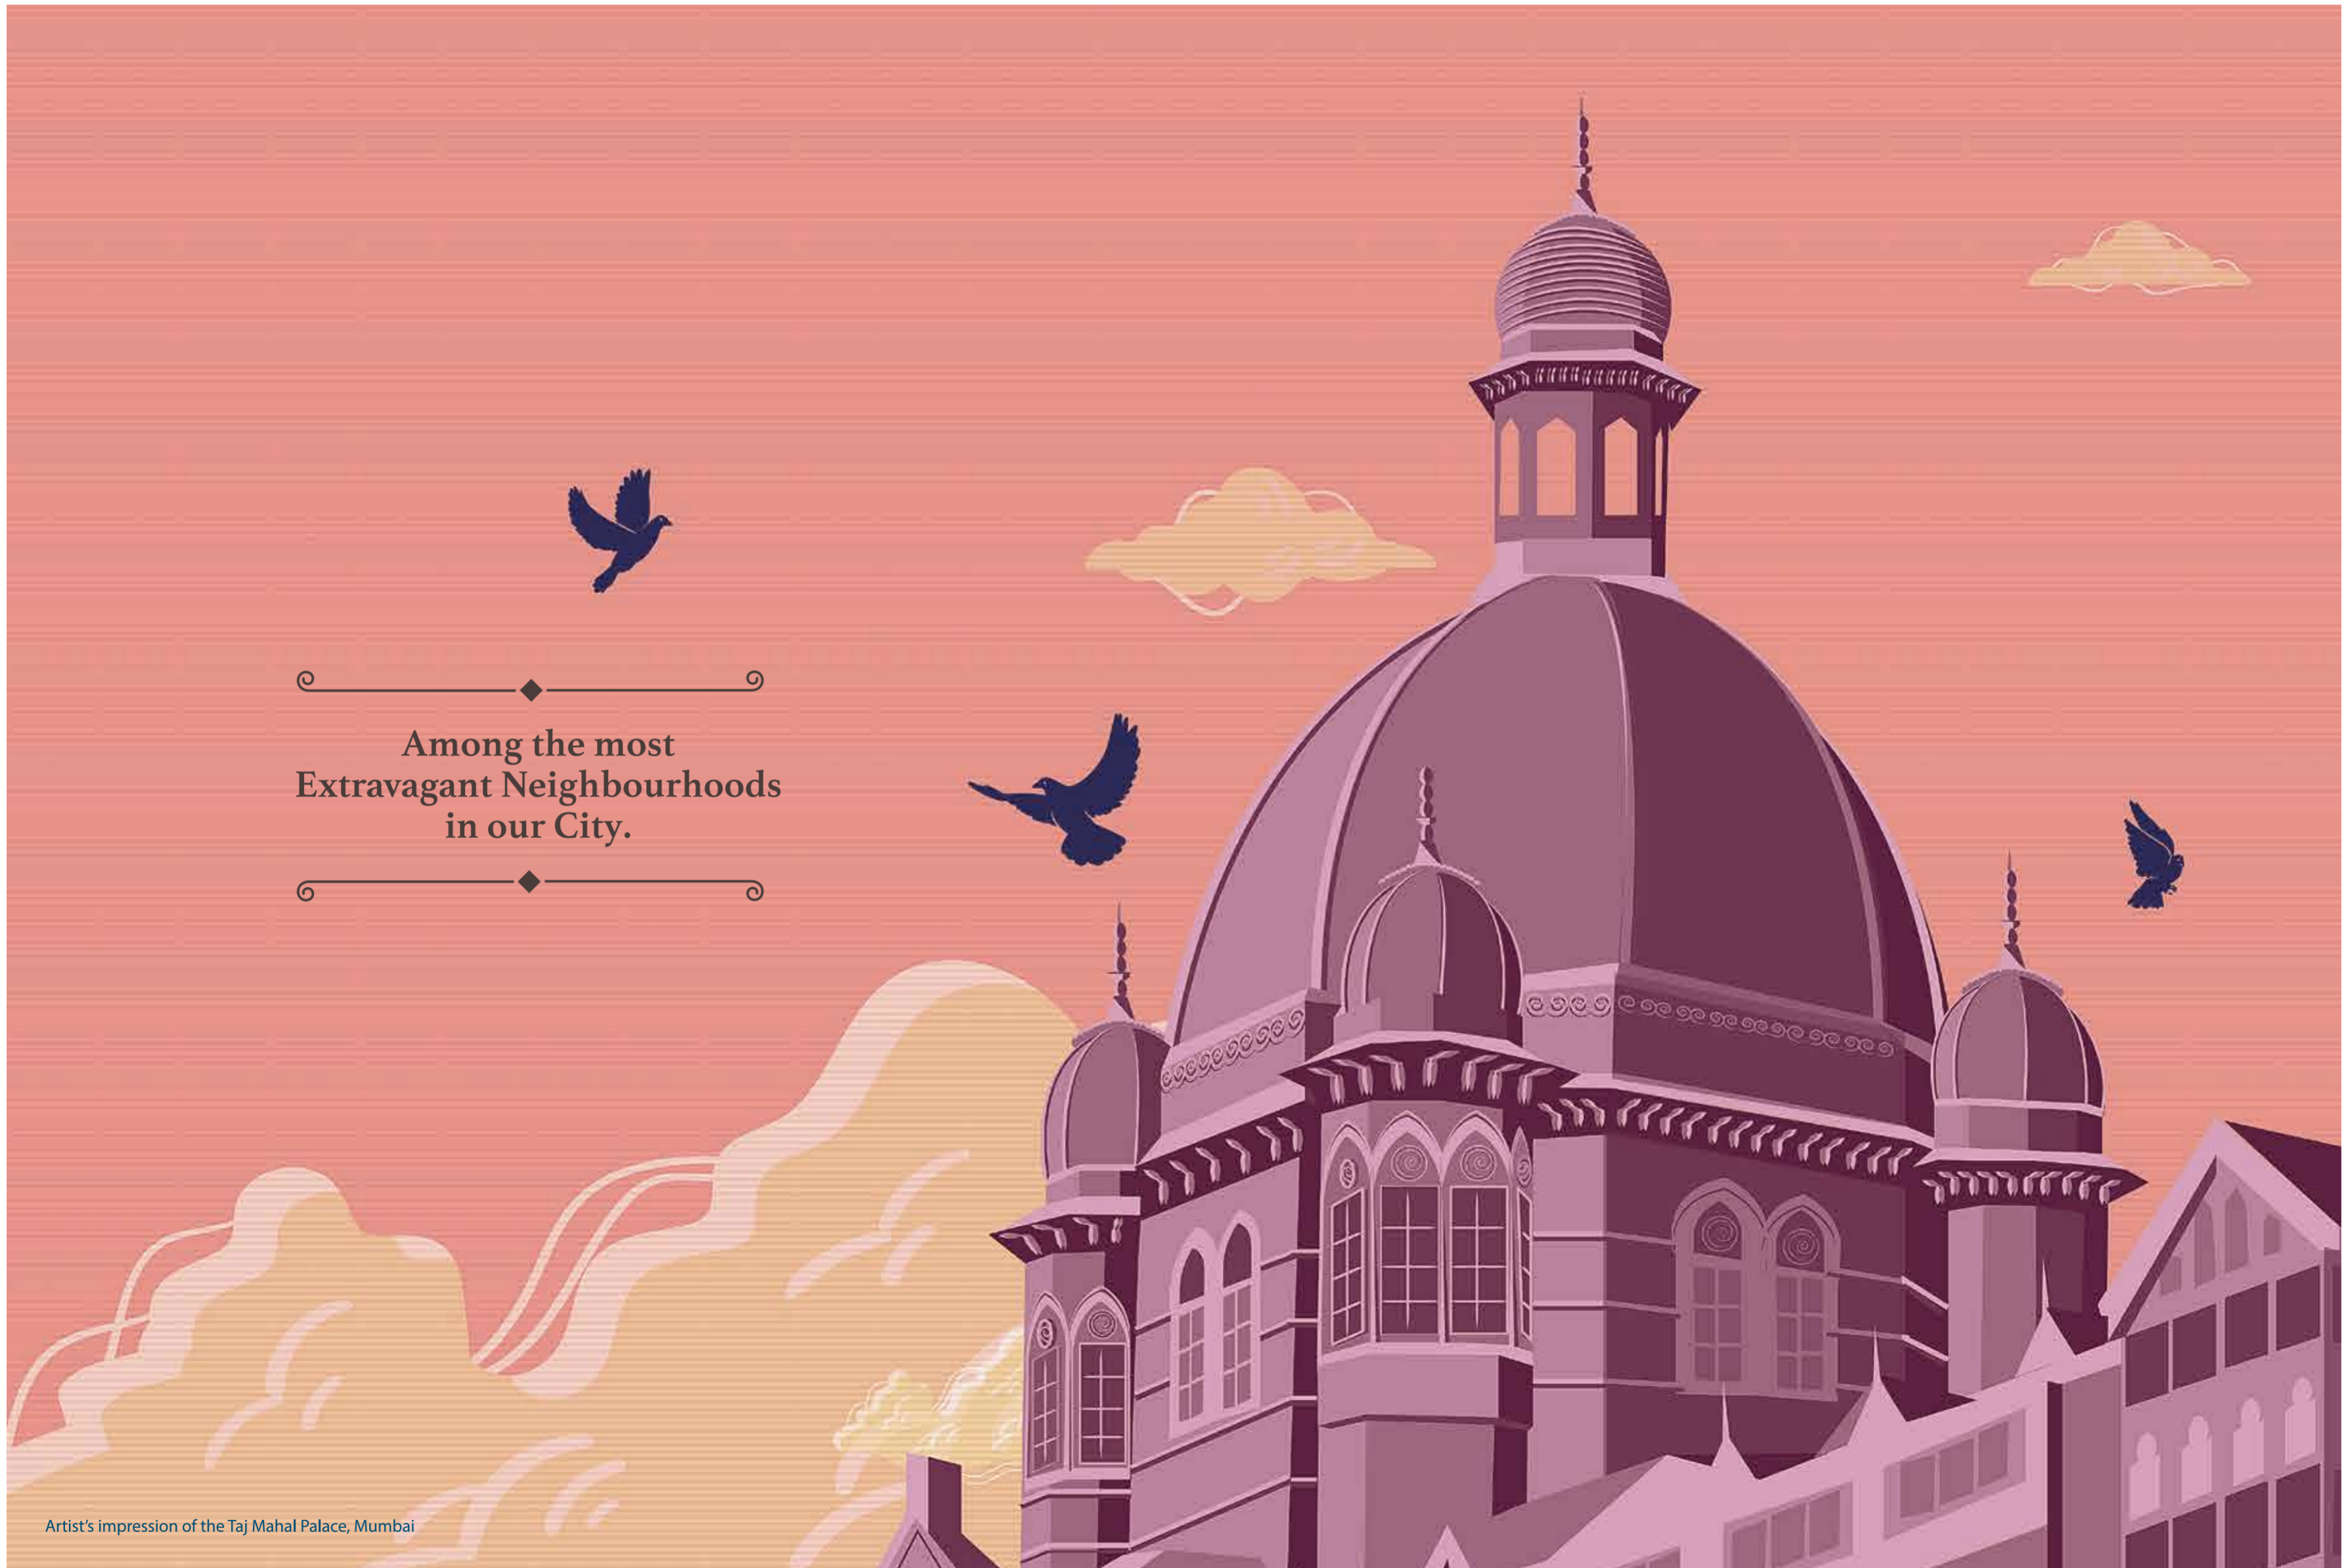

The Art Deco style was easily accepted and accelerated the city's development. The middle-class population in Mumbai was growing due to the expanding port trade and Art Deco architecture, with an Indian touch, was used extensively in the construction of commercial spaces, residences and movie halls.

As a result, today Mumbai has the second-most Art Deco buildings in the world. The first being the city of Miami, in Florida, USA.

However, as was prevalent in those days, Art Deco structures tended to be no more than six storeys tall. You will soon witness Mumbai's first Art Deco Tower.

An address drenched in history.

One of the most affluent locations of South Mumbai, Tardeo, attracts our city's most discerning residents and individuals. It is also considered one of Asia's most expensive residential locations.

This neighbourhood offers easy access to physical infrastructure such as road and rail. That said, the area's biggest attraction is the proximity to large open green spaces and views of the Arabian Sea.

Aside from the physical infrastructure, Tardeo has a lot to offer in terms of its social infrastructure. With a host of restaurants, bars, sports clubs, shops and malls nearby, one is never too far from fulfilling one's social needs. With prominent localities such as Mahalaxmi, Worli, Breach Candy and Altamont Road, nearby, Tardeo is surrounded by prominent residential localities.
