Nitesh Estates is a member of the US Green Building Council (USGBC), Indian Green Building Council (IGBC) and is committed to the principle of sustainability.

The design practice envisaged in our Nitesh Napa Valley project has emphasised efficiency by usage of renewable energy sources such as solar heated water, appropriate building orientation, recycling of water, rainwater harvesting for gardening and aquifer recharge, on-site waste management and control of storm water runoff.

This integration has been possible by close cooperation of the global design team, the architects and the engineers at all stages of the project from concept stage, schematic stage and detailed design and development stage as well as by material selection, quality material procurement and project execution.

INDOOR AIR QUALITY

An essential element of sustainable building design is indoor environment including air quality, illumination, thermal condition and acoustic. The indoor and outdoor environments have been integrated into a seamless continuum.

Fenestration and shading elements bring in controlled light and heat.

Low VOC Paints are used.

The environment temperature around villas is maintained by extensive landscaping. We have many layers of landscaping starting from ground covers, shrubs and avenue trees around the villas.

Extensive use of green enhances the outdoor air quality and also acts as buffer in reducing the pollution in the air.

Effects of noise pollution levels within the micro-environment are considerably reduced.

Native trees which are drought resistant and which do not require long term maintenance have been adopted.

WATER MANAGEMENT

Storm water run-off is curtailed by doing extensive landscape. It increases the water retaining capacity of the soil.

Ground water table recharging from the storm water drain has been designed. Storm water drains will be connected to percolation pits thus recharging the aquifer.

Minimisation of energy in the soil cut and fill activity by utilising the natural contours.

Rain water from the terrace is collected in the storage tank, which in turn, will be filtered and used for domestic / landscape purpose.

Zero discharge of grey water - the water from domestic usage (toilet, kitchen and utility) is treated in the STP. The treated water is used for flushing and landscape.

Centralised water distribution by hydro pneumatic systems has been planned thus ensuring uniform pressure across all villas.

WASTE MANAGEMENT

Recycling and waste management are an essential part of our sustainable design. Organic waste items are designed to decompose in the presence of air, water and soil organisms. Organic waste converter is provided for this purpose and the manure so produced will be used for landscape.

ENERGY EFFICIENCY

Use of CFL lights.

Use of energy efficient pumps.

Tapping solar energy-solar water heater for every villa.

The proper use of SCIENCE, is not to conquer
NATURE
but to live in it.

WHERE A DO NOT DISTURB SIGN WON'T BE REQUIRED
